Challenging old learning methods: Generative AI in Education

Organiser: European School Heads Association

When the internet (& Google) were in vogue, education had to shift from more factual learning to generative learning; critical thinking, writing and interpreting. In today's world, not only all information can be found online, but new technology is also able to write essays, create images, and give it a 'prompt' and it will give you anything you ask for. Generative AI, what does it mean for Education? How can you become an inspiring and transformative leader in your school community? Three specialists in AI and education will discuss the potential risks and the great opportunities of this developing field.
